ABOUT THE STATE.

Items of Interest Gleaned from Our Exchanges.

The vital statistics of the booming mill town, Winooski, as compiled by the town clerk, show 206 births and 140 deaths. This shows that the town's population must be increasing.

It is rumored about Rutland that Woolworth, the well known proprietor of the "Red Store," about Eastern United States, is to open one of these famous five and ten cent stores in Rutland.

Mrs. Stella R. Mead, matron of the Rutland city hospital, who recently resigned to accept a position as matron of the Holderness school at Plymouth, N. H., has been prevailed upon to withdraw her resignation and to remain with the hospital.

The hearing of Pascal Ricci, the Rutland special police who is charged with the illegal selling of liquor, was concluded in Rutland city court Friday. It was thought that sufficient evidence was introduced to justify holding Ricci for the county court.

A new feature is being introduced for the benefit of the private of Co. M, of Burlington. A school of instruction for privates is to be started by Capt. Woodbury and Lieut. Parker and Willard. This school will be held every Friday night for two months and will be conducted by Lieut. Parker.

Wishing to create a little excitement and taking the wreck at Wallouasse as their pattern some evil minded persons opened a switch on the line of the Bennington and Hoosac Valley Electric railroad three times during Thursday evening. The switch led onto an old siding near Paper Mill Village and the siding was long enough to give the motorman time to stop his car before it came to the end of the track where it would have jumped off.

Col. S. A. Bailey of Middlebury was called on by a deputation of influential citizens of Middlebury at his rooms in the Addison house Thursday evening. The purpose of the visit was to present Col. Bailey with a document signed by large number of citizens of Middlebury, thanking Col. Bailey for his many benevolent acts in the village during the past year. Col. Bailey was deeply moved by this extraordinary movement on the part of the residents of the town.

It is expected that the large paper mill at Ryegate Falls will be completed about the first of May. The mill has been constructed at a cost of about $250,000 and is located on the Connecticut river less than a quarter of a mile from the East Ryegate station on the Boston & Maine railroad. It is thought that this industry, which will bring about 250 people into the town, will revive Ryegate from a mere village to a booming town.

The death of Mrs. Ada Moore brings to light a peculiar coincidence. Three daughters, Ada, Beulah, and Maudie Crown the difference in whose ages was exactly one year have all died within three years, each one preceding the other to the grave by just one year. All three of the young women were 23 years of age at the time of death. Mrs. Moore was a bride of only four weeks. She is survived by three brothers, all younger than herself. Mrs. Crown, the mother, lives in fear that her boys will also die when they reach their 22nd year.

THE GUINEA FOWLS.

There seems to be a growing market for them as table birds.

It seems that guinea fowls might well be bred in the United States more extensively than is yet the case either along with other poultry or in larger numbers by themselves. The varieties have been improved in recent years. Judging by the best available data guinea fowl and chicken at moderate prices yield about as much actual nourishment as medium cuts of beef, mutton and pork and are fairly economical. But at fancy prices they are directly comparable with such expensive meats as fillet of beef and French lamb chops. Of course if they are eaten on the farm where they are raised, and especially if they have found most of their food, they are evidently an economical kind of meat. On the other hand, it must not be supposed that as sold in city markets their price is necessarily prohibitive. Families that can afford porterhouse steak and turkey can well afford guinea fowls at ordinary prices and will find that they give a very pleasant variety in the meat list.

The demand for guinea fowls in city markets has recently increased considerably, perhaps quite largely on account of the more stringent game laws now in force, and the price has in general advanced considerably. Whereas a pair formerly sold in New York at 50 cents to 90 cents, they now bring from 90 cents to $1.25 or more.—C. F. Langworthy.

Briettes.

In feeding pigs 615 pounds of roots will save 100 pounds of grain. A mixture of wheat meal and corn meal has been found more effective in fattening swine than either one if fed alone.

I know of men who keep their pigs on the manure pile under or near the horse barn. It isn't right, though. Nice, sweet, healthy meat cannot be made in that way.

Do not throw the nibbles of corn over into the pen and let the pigs shell for themselves. If you do, clean the cobs out first. Doesn't take long for them to get real deep.—Farm Journal.

A Good Investment.

We have never had so many calls for information about bringing water from springs or wells, remarks Rural New Yorker. This indicates a general desire to put water in the house and barn. It is a good sign, both of prosperity and good sense. This is one good way to invest money at home. Such investments make the home comfortable and the farm more salable. The "springs" do not get much chance at the money either.

The War Department.

The war department was established by act of congress Aug. 7, 1789.

A WOMAN TO BE PRETTY

Must Have Luxuriant and Glossy Hair, No Matter What Color.

The finest contour of a female face, the sweetest smile of a female mouth, loses something if the hair is crowned with scant hair. Scant and falling hair, it is now known, is caused by a parasite that burrows into the scalp to the root of the hair, where it saps the vitality. The little white scales the germ throws up in burrowing are called dandruff. To cure dandruff permanently, then, and to stop falling hair, that germ must be killed. Newbro's Herpicide, an entirely new result of the chemical laboratory, destroys the dandruff germ, and, of course, stops the falling hair and prevents baldness. Sold by leading druggists. Send 10c. in stamps for sample to The Herpicide Co., Detroit, Mich.

Turned Down for Fair.

Slowly they walked along in the twilight—she and he.

He was no longer in the heyday of youth.

"Time, however, had laid light hands upon him. So had his barber, but often and more artistically, and he was well groomed."

She was a rare and radiant maiden, known to the regular frequenters of Knott's & Co.'s great emporium of trade, as the girl at the counter.

"Miss Mildred," he said, with a sort of premonitory cough, "let us suppose a case."

"A case of what kind, Mr. Matwew?" she asked. "Notions or remnants?"

"Let us not talk shop Miss Mildred. If 'case' suggests business I will vary the phrase. Let us consider a hypothesis."

"A what?"

"A hypothesis. A hypothesis is a supposition, an assumption, a postulate, a working basis, or an idea taken for granted. For the purpose of laying a foundation, establishing a proposition, or demonstrating a fact. Do you see the idea?"

"Oh, yes; anybody can understand that. Is there more of it?"

"There is. Some day, my dear girl, you expect to marry somebody?"

"Is that a hypo-hypo?"

"No; that is one of the eternal verities. Every pretty girl expects to marry somebody. Here is the hypothesis: Suppose some man, slightly past the blooming period of youth, but well preserved, in full possession of health, strength, and all his intellectual faculties."

"A hypothesis is a man, it is?"

"Suppose some such man as I am describing, not at all ill-looking, and possessed of a reasonable share of this world's goods, should fall wildly, madly, desperately in love with you, Miss Mildred—"

"And offer you his hand and heart—do you think you could learn to love him?"

"Not if he looked anything like you, Mr. Matwew."

They walked along a block or two in silence.

Then Mr. Matwew spoke again.

"Think of a little if I were going to 'snore'—Chicago Tribune.

Spilled Her Beauty.
